

Article of Evidence #6: Rebuilding Rails

The screenshot shows a Stripe dashboard for a business named "Rebuilding-rails". The left sidebar contains navigation options: Home, Payments, Disputes, Balance, Customers, Radar, Billing, Connect, Orders, Developers, View test data, and Settings. The main area displays a list of customers with columns for amount ($39.99), currency (USD), status (Succeeded or Disputed), and a redacted email address. A detailed view of a customer's payment history is shown on the right, listing four payments for "Rebuilding Rails" with dates and amounts.

Amount	Currency	Status	Customer ID
$39.99	USD	Succeeded	su
$39.99	USD	Succeeded	fre
$39.99	USD	Succeeded	m.
$39.99	USD	Succeeded	wz
$39.99	USD	Disputed	jes
$39.99	USD	Succeeded	da
$39.99	USD	Succeeded	ric
$39.99	USD	Succeeded	he
$39.99	USD	Succeeded	iar
$39.99	USD	Succeeded	kij
$39.99	USD	Succeeded	oz
$39.99	USD	Succeeded	ba
$39.99	USD	Succeeded	ka
$39.99	USD	Succeeded	me

Product	Date	Amount

Rebuilding Rails	May 16, 2019 6:37 AM	$39.99

I'm the author of a self-published book titled "Rebuilding Rails" (see: <https://rebuilding-rails.com>). I've sold over 1,500 copies based on doing my own advertising. While that's hard to verify using publicly-available information, here are screenshots showing Stripe and Gumroad dashboards (I've used both Stripe and Gumroad to collect payments over the years.) This shows just over 1,500 customers, and doesn't include a few other sales through other channels. Customer emails are intentionally redacted above.

In addition to the text itself, Rebuilding Rails includes example code which I have copied into a GitHub repository (<https://github.com/noahgibbs/rulers>). As you can see below, as of this writing it has 6 watchers, 44 GitHub stars and is "used by" 152 repositories.

The Rulers framework from Rebuilding Rails - caution, will occasionally require a "git pull -f" due to rebase <https://rebuilding-rails.com>
